pouch. The other end of the body has fastening devices that attach them to the belt opposite the pouch to form a conventional-looking swimsuit.

4. A novel aspect of the invention, which is claimed in claim 1, is a first member (such as a loop) which encircles a human torso and a second member (including a body) which has an end that is detachably coupled to the first member. The second member (which includes the body) and is separate and distinct from the first member.

Respectfully submitted,
